AMONG THE UTES.

Exciting Experience of the Captive Women.

A Story of Bravery and Bitter Hardships.

Demoniacal Dolings of the Dastardly Douglas.

National Associated Press to the Star.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—A special dispatch gives pathetic details of the experience of the women captured by the Uta Indians and released yesterday, as reported by the National Associated Press Agent. After the killing of Agent Meeker the women attempted to escape into the brush from the burning buildings. Mrs. Meeker was fired at and received a flesh wound in the hip four inches in length. The Indians called to Miss Meeker and Mrs. Price, "Indians no shoot! White woman stop! Indian no hurt."

After being secured they were mounted on ponies. Miss Meeker, with Mrs. Price's oldest child behind her, Mrs. Price with the infant in her arms, and Mrs. Meeker, who is sixty-four years of age and lame. They were compelled to accompany their captors. When they struck camp at midnight Mrs. Meeker was dismounted and fell to the ground unable to move. The Indians surrounded her and added to her misery by jeering and taunting "the old white squaw." The next morning they were separated, Douglass taking charge of Mrs. Meeker, Miss Meeker and Mrs. Price, the children being guarded by an Uncomphgre Ute.

The sufferings of Miss Meeker were indescribable during her stay with Douglass, whose squaw abused her, striking and taunting her. On one occasion Douglass threw down blankets and compelled Miss Meeker to dismount, saying, "We're going to stab them!" and exhibited butcher-knives to be used for the purpose. He then placed a musket to her forehead and said, "Indian going to shoot!" The courageous girl never flinched, and laughed at the burly savage. He asked her if she was afraid, and her ready response was: "I am not afraid of Indians or of death!" which elicited the admiration of the devils.

AERIAL ADVENTURES.

How Hale Was Hustled Into Lake Ontario.

A Mysterious Air Ship Seen at Rockford.

National Associated Press to the Star.

ROCKFORD, ILL., Oct. 29.—Some children discovered in the sky in the south at an immense height a large balloon. It was visible for a quarter of an hour, passing out of sight in the northwest. It was at a great distance above the clouds. The sun was shining brightly at the time, and it could be readily recognized as a balloon.

A 5 p. m. the same balloon was seen coming from the northwest and passing towards the east. It was much nearer and the car could be very plainly seen. A dark object was seen by some on one side of the car. It is thought to be the balloon in which Prof. Wise and Burr were up at St. Louis. Large numbers watched it till it had disappeared from view.

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—The Times publishes the account of one James Hale, of a balloon ascension which he made a good many years ago with Prof. H. J. Kane at Canandaigua, N. Y., and which he thinks closely resembles the ascent of Wise and Burr except that the latter escaped alive while Burr was drowned.

They floated over Lake Ontario until night came, and the balloon began to sink. All the ballast was thrown out, but to no purpose. They nearly struck the mast of a passing schooner, and it appeared every moment as though they would drop into the waves. Finally Kane said, "One of us can get to Canada, but the other must feed fish. I've got a family, and I'm going to Canada," and whipping out a knife he leaped into the rigging and cut the basket loose. Hale dropped into the middle of the lake.

He was a good swimmer and got upon the basket. The next day he was picked up by the steamer Corinthian, bound for Rochester, but Kane never was heard from. Hale calls attention to the similarity in the Donaldson case. The body of Grinnwood was found on the shore, and in the case of Wise the body of Burr was found on the shore.

In case of Kane, the passenger became merely a matter of ballast when the question was whether the balloon must swamp or rise, and was very fortunate in being dropped in frequented waters, and in the regular track of a steamer. In the case of Donaldson, Wise and Kane, another similar feature is found. Neither aeronaut nor his balloon was ever afterwards heard from, and probably never will be.

REDPATH'S RAMBLES.

Flees From Carbuncles and Dyspepsia to Jamaica.

And Pulls Up, Seedy and Forlorn, at San Francisco.

National Associated Press to the Star.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 29.—J. G. Redpath, of the Literary Bureau, whose mysterious disappearance from New York, early last month, gave rise to much conjecture, arrived here last evening from Panama by the steamer Colima, and is stopping at the Palace Hotel. In a conversation with a reporter he stated that some time previous to his disappearance he suffered much from dyspepsia, which showed itself externally in the shape of carbuncles. Late in the summer, after making arrangements for a series of entertainments, to be given in the various cities of the Union, a large carbuncle appeared behind his right ear, and he felt that softening of the brain was coming on.

While in this state, and not knowing what he was about, he wandered on board a steamer bound for the island of Jamaica, which sailed from New York on September 6th. On arriving at Kingston his reason was restored, and he found he had only $7 in money. Being unable to telegraph for more, he wrote to friends in the United States and, after a delay of three weeks, received a remittance which enabled him to leave. Determining to return by way of the Pacific, he took a steamer to Aspinwall and from Panama sailed for here.

Here Mr. Redpath found several letters and money inclosures awaiting him, so it is evident his friends were aware of his later movements. He presents rather a rough and seedy appearance, but his mind appears sound. He expresses an intention to remain here for some time.

Boy Shot and Dangerously Wounded.

For some time past Julius R. Holst, a saloon-keeper at No. 80 East Front street, has been annoyed considerably by young men and boys congregating about his place of business, who raise disturbances and often settle their quarrels with a fight. Last evening about 8 o'clock a large number of them had collected about his premises. They were so noisy that a carpenter named Chris. Windholz (who lives at No. 80) went in the crowd and tried to get them to disperse. He was knocked down and beaten about the face and head. Several pistol shots were fired, two of which went crashing through the front window of the saloon. The bar-keeper, B. Geller, went to the door, followed by Holst with a revolver.

The row was still going on outside, and Geller, taking the pistol from Holst, fired two or three shots in the crowd. Geller then walked back in the bar-room, when Holst took the pistol away from him and went to the door and fired a couple of shots also. After the row subsided somewhat, it was discovered that a boy named Henry Strater, nineteen years of age, and residing at No. 111 East Front street, had been shot in the right breast, the ball penetrating the lung. The boy was carried to his home, where Dr. Brown was called in. He probed the wound, but was unable to find the ball. He pronounced the wound a very dangerous one, and has very little hopes of the boy's recovery. Holst and Geller were both arrested, and taken to the Hammond-street Station-house.

Holst and Geller were arraigned in the Police Court this morning, charged with shooting with intent to kill. Their cases were continued until November 5th, the bail being fixed at $300. The boy was resting easy this morning, and will probably recover.
